Bulleted: a bullet, a tabulation, and 14 points in front of the body.

- Every line below the first lines up with the words, not with the bullet.
- The marker hangs in the room the negative first-line indent opens.
- A long item wraps inside the block and stays inside it.

Numbered: the same block, widened to 22 points for the widest marker.

1. A number hangs out to the left exactly as a bullet does.
2. The room in front is what the widest marker needs, not the narrowest.

10. A two-figure number still ends before the stop the body begins at.

Nested: the inner list is the same block again, its markers standing where the outer bodies begin.

1. Prepare the document, the font it draws through and the page it fills.
    a. Read the font from its file and hand it to the document.
    b. Name the page size, in points.
2. Add each page, with the content stream it was built from.