Notice of rate change

This notice claims the second part of the archival standard at its highest level. On top of the promise that the page keeps its looks, and on top of every mark of ink saying which letter it stands for, the file says what it is made of: this line is a heading, that block is a paragraph, and the rule across the foot is furniture that says nothing at all.
Something reading the notice aloud follows the order the tree gives rather than the order the ink was laid down in, and reading software on a telephone has something to reflow.

The new rate applies to every order acknowledged on or after 1 May 2026. Orders already acknowledged stand at the rate they were acknowledged at.
