Work carried out this quarter

Every block on this page was pushed onto a stack in the order it is read, and the stack decided where each of them goes. Nothing here was placed against a measured height: a paragraph that grows pushes what follows it down the page, and onto the next one when the room runs out.

The table above was cut wherever the room ran out, and its heading row was drawn again at the top of every page it was carried onto. This paragraph was kept together, so it is never left with a single line at the foot of a page while the rest of it starts the next one.
